

Alham Alkhatri is a sophomore at John Jay College of Criminal Justice, majoring in Law and Society with a passion for research. She has been on the Dean's List for a year and is currently involved in the John Jay Alumni Program. Her experience as a mentee under a current attorney is shaping her career aspirations as a future lawyer.

Previously, Alham interned as a researcher at Vngle Grassroots News Agency, where she collaborated with a team to explore college students' perceptions of media coverage on local issues and marginalized groups to further develop her research skills.

Currently, she holds a position as a Research and Administrative Assistant at the Office for Student Research & Creativity at John Jay College. Alham aspires to become a lawyer, specializing in immigration law to support people through the complexities of seeking asylum, citizenship, and residency, and advocating for their rights.
